

Gambrinus Fellow Professor Kevin Wong (Pepperdine University, California)

The Potential of Educational Media for Multilingual Development

Screen-based supports and scaffolding for dual language learners

In his talk, Prof. Wong will report research results regarding the effects of multimodal enhancement in relation to vocabulary learning among pre-primary dual language learners. Drawing on dual-coding theory, the lecture will consider potentials for literacy development on the incidental-intentional language learning continuum.

Kevin Wong 黄浩文博士 is an assistant professor and chair of the MA in TESOL program at Pepperdine University. Dr. Wong's research is informed by his biracial, trilingual upbringing in Hong Kong where he was a public elementary/primary school teacher. Now at Pepperdine, he directs the Multilingual, Multiracial, Multicultural Education Research Group, examining raciolinguistic ideologies and identity among students (with a particular interest in multiracial individuals), language learning in ESL/EFL, dual language immersion, digital contexts, and humanizing pedagogies and methodologies in applied linguistics research.

Wednesday,
June 5th 2024
17:45 – 19:15

Emil-Figge-Str. 50
Room 3.208

Refreshments will be served.

This event is being held with the generous support of the Department for Language, Literature and Culture.

This lecture is open to the public. For further information please contact carolyn.blume@tu-dortmund.de

SPONSORED BY THE